Foreword

Strangers in This World: Multireligious Reflections on Immigration began as a project undertaken by several fellows of the American Academy of Religion/Luce Foundation Summer Seminars on Comparative Theology and Theologies of Religious Pluralism, cohort II (2010–2011). The editors wish to thank the Seminar for providing the inspiration and opportunity to develop the idea into the present volume, and we also wish to acknowledge the American Academy of Religion’s support of this project by providing a place in the Annual Meetings to work on this project. John Thatamanil, the Director of the Seminars, deserves much credit for not only organizing and leading the seminars, but also in encouraging the project from the beginning. The Teaching Team and other fellows of the Seminar provided insightful feedback and were invaluable conversation partners.

Alexander Y. Hwang, Hussam S. Timani, and Allen J. Jorgenson