

Table of Contents

Preface

Introduction

A New Metaphor for God

Economy, Politics, and Power

The Components of Political Economy

The Triune God and the Problems We Face

1. God's Economy and the Church

Economic Perplexity

Scarcity, Satiation, and Security

The Separation of Theology and Economics

Faith and the Ambiguity of Economics

The Church's Oikonomia

2. Reconceptualizing God and Economy

The Semantic Fields of Theology and Economy

Oikos as Correlative Term

God's Justice and the Market Logic

Ways of Correlating God and Economy

The Context of a Transformative Correlation

3. God and the Market Logic

The Eclipse of God in the Market

The Peculiarly Economic: Exchange or Livelihood?

Theological Critique of the Liberal Theory

Roots of Domination in the Market

The Acquisitive Human Being: Justifying the Process of Accumulation

God Concepts in the Market Assumptions

4. God the Economist

The Liberator

The Torah Keeper as Economist

The Creator Economist

The Image of God as Economist

The Resurrection God as Economist

The Diakonos of Jesus as Economist

Transformative Correlation of God and Economy

5. God and Property

The Promise and Threat of Property: Freedom and Mastery

Trinitarian Reflection on God and Property

Toward a Revision of Property: The Inclusive Right to Life and Work

6. God and Work

7. God and Needs

Conclusion

Notes

Bibliography

Indexes