

Contributors

Bradley Beach received his PhD from Syracuse University and is Associate Professor of Philosophy at Walsh University. His philosophical interests are centered upon metaphysics, philosophy of religion and philosophical theology. He has published in philosophy of religion, metaphysics, and ethics.

Laurence F. Bove is professor of philosophy and provost at Walsh University in North Canton, Ohio. He received his BA and PhD in philosophy from St. John's University, New York. His presentations and publications examine issues concerning ethics, the philosophy of nonviolence, bioethics, social and political philosophy, and peace studies. He has written extensively on the nature and ethics of revenge. He co-edited From the Eye of the Storm: Regional Conflicts and the Philosophy of Peace (Rodopi, 1995), Philosophical Perspectives on Power and Domination (Rodopi, 1997), and Introduction to Face to Face with the Real World: Contemporary Applications of Levinas, a dedicated volume of Philosophy in the Contemporary World, 7, no. 1 (Spring 2000). Dr. Bove is a past president of the Concerned Philosophers for Peace.

Chris Danta is senior lecturer in English in the School of the Arts and Media at the University of New South Wales, Sydney. He is the author of Literature Suspends Death: Sacrifice and Storytelling in Kierkegaard, Kafka and Blanchot (Continuum, 2011) and the co-editor of Strong Opinions: J. M. Coetzee and the Authority of Contemporary Fiction (Continuum, 2011). He has also published essays in New Literary History, Angelaki, Textual Practice, Modernism/modernity, SubStance and Literature & Theology.

Ronald M. Green is the Eunice and Julian Cohen Professor for the Study of Ethics and Human Values in the Department of Religion at Dartmouth College. From 1992 to 2011 he served as Director of Dartmouth's Ethics Institute. In 1998, he was elected president of the Society of Christian Ethics. Professor Green is the author of nine books and over 160 articles on philosophical and applied ethics, including business ethics and bioethics. Two of his books, Kierkegaard and Kant: The Hidden Debt (State University of New York Press, 1992), and Kant and Kierkegaard on Time and Eternity (Mercer University Press, 2011), have played a major role in uncovering the depth and extent of Kierkegaard's relationship to Kant's philosophy. In 2005, Professor Green was named a Guggenheim Fellow.

Matthew T. Powell received his PhD from Marquette University studying the relationship between tradition and contemporary Western society through the lens of literature and philosophy. He has taught at Walsh University and has published extensively on the life and works of Franz Kafka.

Rabbi John H. Spitzer currently serves as associate professor of Jewish studies in the Theology Division of Walsh University (North Canton, Ohio). He holds a BA degree from Washington University (St. Louis, MO); a BHL, an MAHL, and Rabbinic Ordination from the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion (Cincinnati, OH); and a DMin from the Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. Rabbi Spitzer retired following thirty-five years of pulpit service and currently is the Director of the Walsh University Jewish/Catholic Studies Institute and Walsh University Lifelong Learning Academy.

Preston Stovall is a PhD candidate in philosophy at the University of Pittsburgh. He works on modal metaphysics and the philosophy of language, informed by interests in German idealism and classical American pragmatism.

Andrew Tebbutt is a doctoral student in the Department for the Study of Religion at the University of Toronto.

Carey Walsh received her (ThD from Harvard and is associate professor of Old Testament at Villanova University. She is the author of Chasing Mystery: A Catholic Biblical Theology (Liturgical, 2013), Exquisite Desire: Religion, Erotics, and the Song of Songs (Fortress Press, 2000), and The Fruit of the Vine: Viticulture in Ancient Israel (Eisenbrauns, 2000).

Isra Yazicioglu is an assistant professor of Islamic studies at St Joseph's University, Philadelphia, PA. Her research focus is Qur'anic hermeneutics, with special attention to the 20th century exegete Said Nursi, and the connection between sacred text, intellect, and spirituality. She authored the book Understanding the Qur'anic Miracle Stories in the Modern Age (Penn State University Press, 2013). Yazicioglu holds an MA in Islamic Studies and Christian-Muslim Relations from Hartford Seminary and PhD in Religious Studies from University of Virginia.